Arrest Reveals Strange Pact

Arrest of Harold Martin Luther, 28, and his wife, Ruby, 17, revealed to Chicago, Illinois, police what they termed the couple's strange pact purporting to give either permission to slay the other or blind the other's eyes should his or her mate be found unfaithful. They were arrested on accusation of carrying with them while begging their 19-month-old daughter, Martina. The baby is shown with them after police seizure.

STATE'S CHAIN STORE TAX IS RULED INVALID

Harrisburg, Feb. 20 (AP)—The chain store tax of 1937, imposing a levy of $1 to $500 based on the number of stores under one ownership, was declared unconstitutional by the Dauphin county court today.

The act applied to chain stores and theatres. Governor James said he may order an appeal to the Supreme court "to learn the final status of the act" unless his attorney general advises him otherwise.

He said if the Department of Justice decided the Dauphin decision was proper he would "let the matter rest."

President Judge William M. Hargest ruled that the tax was "confiscatory" and that it violated the uniform taxation clause of the state constitution.

He granted a permanent injunction retaining the state from enforcing the act.

Judge Hargest said in his opinion: "The act, creating a pretended classification based solely on the number of stores and imposing taxes on the several classes at different and progressively increasing rates is unjust, arbitrary illegal and wanting in uniformity."

"The act classifying stores into 12 separate classes solely upon the basis of the number of stores within the commonwealth of Pennsylvania under the same general management, supervision or ownership, and not upon the basis of any differences in kind or character between the same, constitutes an invalid classification."

Two score chain stores attacked the constitutionality of the tax.

Fairfield Priest Describes Three Audiences With Pope

St. Mary's Parish council of the National Council of Catholic Women held its regular monthly meeting Friday night at the home of Mrs. J. Harry Pecher, Fairfield. Twenty-one members and nearly as many guests were present. An oyster platter luncheon was served at the close of the meeting. The members decided to hold a food sale to meet the council's assessment for rural vacation school maintenance in the Harrisburg diocese.

A feature of special interest was a talk given by the Rev. Fr. Paul A. Gieringer, the council's chaplain and pastor of St. Mary's church, Fairfield. He spoke of his personal recollections of Pope Pius XI. He described two audiences he had with the late pope during the Holy Year of 1925 and a third in 1930. He also gave a vivid description of a Solemn Pontifical Mass which he saw the Holy Father celebrate in St. Peter's in the presence of more than thirty thousand worshippers from all over the world.

In telling of his first audience he related an interesting story about an old Mexican woman in his company who had made the long journey to Rome to realize her lifetime dream of seeing the Holy Father. Clapping tightly a tiny beaded sack of gold coins which she meant to be

Two Motorists Violate Borough's Traffic Laws

Borough Officer Glenn Guise arrested two motorists for traffic violations on Sunday and filed the charges before Justice of the Peace John H. Bashore.

Joseph P. Keffer, McSherrystown, posted a bond covering a $5 fine and the costs on a charge of passing a red traffic light at Buford avenue and Chambersburg street. He failed to appear at 9 o'clock this morning for a hearing and the bond was forfeited.

Francis L. Yingling, Orrtanna R. 1, is to be sent the usual 10-day notice to appear before the local justice on a charge of passing the stop sign at the York-Hanover street intersection.

Mrs. Dolie Adams, Gettysburg R. 1, has been confined by illness to her bed for two weeks. Her condition is unimproved. Mrs. Adams is the widow of John F. Adams, a Civil war veteran, and a sister of Albert J. Lentz, World war veteran killed in France.

Property Transfers

Lillie E. Haar, administratrix of the estate of David M. Lehigh, late of Berwick township, to Stewart P. Mehring, Penn. township, York county, two tracts including 17 acres in Berwick township and a tract of five acres in Penn. township.

Lizzie Murtorf, Huntington township, to George C. and Amelia Murtorf, Gardners R. 2, a one-acre plot in Huntington township.

Henry C. Clabaugh, Liberty township, to William C. Clabaugh, Littlestown, one-half interest in a 72-acre property in Liberty township.

a gift for the Holy Father, she smiled triumphantly as she moved her stout form over the threshold of the Vatican, but a few minutes later her smile gave way to blank, then tearful despair. She found herself at the foot of the Scala Regia, a flight of over two hundred steps leading up to the audience chambers which it was hopeless for her to attempt to climb, and there was no elevator. She was on the point of collapsing under the bitter disappointment when the Rev. Father Gieringer came to her aid by inducing two strong men, after considerable persuasion, to carry her up the long flight.

In 1925, he said, the pope presented an athletic figure fresh from his Alpine mountaineering, a full-chested man of clear and healthy complexion, quick step and cheerful mien. But in 1930 he noticed a sad and ominous change. The pope's color had paled, his step was slow and heavy; his face and figure had taken on unmistakable signs of tired old age. Five years of terrific toil and crushing sorrows had taken their toll. And yet, as Father Gieringer pointed out, with ever-growing agonies amid increasing hardships and trials he was destined to devote nine more years to the arduous duties of his high office before he was to find release in death.

TWO JAILED FOR TRYING TRICK WITH LICENSE

A Maryland driver who handed a Pennsylvania state motor policeman a companion's driver's license and represented it to be his own is serving a 10-day sentence in the county jail with the man who loaned the operating card.

An officer from the Gettysburg substation was checking traffic on a main road near Gettysburg, Sunday, when he stopped a car and asked the operator for his driver's license and the driver handed him a license card.

Suspecting that something was amiss, the policeman asked the driver what his middle initial was. The man said "F" while the license showed the name of "John N. Feeser," Taneytown, Maryland. Confronted with those facts the driver admitted he was David F. Myerly, Taneytown, and that his companion was Feeser.

The men were taken before Justice of the Peace John H. Bashore where Myerly was charged with displaying the operator's license of another driver and representing it as his own. Feeser was charged with lending his permit.

Neither man was able to pay the $50 fine the justice levied in each case and both were committed to jail to serve 10-day sentences.

Other arrests over the week-end included these: Paul R. Ritchie, Gettysburg R. 2, who was sentenced to spend five days in the county jail in default of payment of a $10 fine and costs for driving without an operator's license; Ace Hoffman, Larchville, Pa., who paid Justice Bashore a $10 fine and costs for driving without an operator's license, and Edgar T. Ward, Cook, Illinois, who paid Justice Joseph L. Kane, Franklin township, a $10 fine and costs for making a bad pass on the approach to the crest of Mt. Newman.

FINED FOR CRASH IN BIGLERVILLE

As the result of a charge filed before Justice of the Peace John H. Deatrick, Biglerville, following an automobile accident in that borough early Saturday afternoon, Hyman Lieblich, 42, Brooklyn, New York, paid a fine of $10 and the costs. He was charged with entering a main line of traffic without signalling.

Lieblich is reported to have backed from a parking place along the west side of the main street in Biglerville, near the hotel, when his machine struck the south-bound car of Charles Reed, Biglerville. No one was hurt.

Damage to the Biglerville man's car was estimated at about $7, while the New Yorker's damage was placed at about $35.

Officer K. Yemzow, of the Gettysburg detail of the state motor police, investigated. He filed the charge against Lieblich.

ELECTED TO FRATERNITY

Many Fail to Realize Deity Is Bread of Life, Says Morrow

"Jesus Christ, the Bread of Life," became mechanical. There cannot be too much activity in our Christianity, but it becomes sounding brass and clanging cymbal when there is no time given to meditation and communion. It does not ring true. Men who are most active, who have many imperative calls on their spiritual and physical resources, as Washington at Valley Forge, have found time is not wasted when spent in secret fellowship with God.

"Christ performed the miracle to meet the need of the multitude and the conscious inadequacy of the disciples. It was a sign and symbol that He is the bread of life. Christ used the resources of the disciples. They had an insufficient quantity—five barley loaves and two fishes. They had an insufficient quality—barley bread in those days was the food of the poorest. Christ said, 'Bring them to me.' However inadequate our capacities Christ can use them if we bring them to Him. Then he said, 'Make them sit down.' Mark describes the groups sitting in companies of hundreds and fifties. Jesus was never the author of

A-Fishing, Then A-Fighting

President Roosevelt waves goodbye from the launch in which he shoved off from Key West, Florida, to board (after a few hours' fishing) the U. S. S. Houston bound for naval maneuvers. The Houston, with President Roosevelt aboard, arrived off Guantanamo, Cuba, today as the contending "black" and "white" naval forces assumed positions for one of the most significant war games in the history of the American fleet. The first radio message from the Houston to temporary White House headquarters at Miami, Florida, said the 9,050-ton cruiser would visit Guantanamo bay this morning but the President would not go ashore.

DRIVER ABOUT TO AID HIKERS CAUSES CRASH

Earl Gebhart, 17, Maple avenue, Hanover, was injured when his car collided with that of Paul L. Becker, 19, Spring Grove R. D., as the latter backed his machine along the Hanover-Glen Rock road toward three girl hitch-hikers who had "thumbed" a ride.

Mrs. Mary Shaffer, 244 Steinwehr avenue, witnessed the crash and took Gebhart to the Hanover General hospital where he was treated for a laceration of the forehead, bruises of the right knee and brush burns on the right arm. He was discharged later from the institution.

Gebhart was traveling south on the road at a point about a mile from Hanover. He was following Becker who is reported to have stopped suddenly and started to back toward three girls along the highway who had asked for a ride. He backed into the front of the Hanover car.

Gebhart reported to Officer D. Harris, of the Gettysburg detail of the state motor police, that he was unable to avoid the collision by passing Becker because Mrs. Shaffer's car was approaching from the opposite direction.

Two Hanover youths in the Gebhart car were unhurt. Officer Harris said today he will file a reckless driving charge before Justice of the Peace John W. Dubs, Penn. township, York county, against Becker.

Damage to the Gebhart car was estimated at $75, while the Becker machine was damaged to the extent of about $35.

Temperature Breaks Into 70's, But Cold Breezes Will Return

Don't let the weather fool you.

The spring-like temperatures that have prevailed for the last few days are due to disappear if the weatherman's forecast for cloudy and much colder weather for Tuesday come true.

After hitting a high of 64 degrees on Sunday the mercury went even higher this afternoon and reached 71 degrees about 1:30 o'clock. Today's mark set a record for nine years on February 20.

Sunday's peak was the second highest on February 19 in 30 years, the previous high in that time being reached last year. The minimum temperature Sunday night was 55 degrees.

RURAL CARRIERS VOTE J. R. HAMME NEW PRESIDENT

The Adams County Rural Mail Carriers' association and its women's auxiliary elected officers at a meeting conducted here Saturday evening.

The carriers elected J. Richard Hamme, New Oxford, as their new president succeeding W. A. Sinner, East Berlin, who had held the office for two years. These officers were re-elected: Vice president, Clyde Musselman, Fairfield; secretary, Paris Pentz, Fairfield; and treasurer, Robert Neely, also of Fairfield.

Norman W. Storrick, Gettysburg; Mr. Hamme, Mr. Sinner and Charles Pfeiffer, Gettysburg, were chosen as delegates of the county organization to the state convention of rural carriers to be held early this fall at Beaver Falls.

During their business session, which was held in the Arcadia club rooms, center square, the carriers decided to seek state highway department aid in improving many county roads included on rural mail routes which frequently become almost or completely impassable.

Members of the women's auxiliary met at the Y. W. C. A. building during the evening and named these officers: President, Mrs. Hamme; vice president, Mrs. Curtis Sponseller; secretary, Mrs. Merle Yohe and treasurer, Mrs. Storrick.

Following the carriers' business session they joined the women at the "Y" building where refreshments were served during a social hour. About 15 carriers and their wives attended.

The next carriers' meeting will be held at the call of President Hamme.

CLASSIS HOLDS RETREAT TODAY

About 12 years ago, Mr. and Mrs. Smick retired from farming and moved to 35 East Lincoln avenue, Gettysburg. Their only son, John Smick, continued to operate the farm. Mr. Smick then became manager of the Adams County Farm Bureau when that co-operating buyers' organization was formed. He successfully launched it and got it well started and its operation is still continued. Two years later he accepted a position with the Champion Milling Company and traveled over most of Pennsylvania as a sales representative for that concern.

Well Known in Elks Circles

About six years ago, he became steward for the club of Gettysburg Lodge No. 1045, Benevolent and Protective order of Elks, of which he has been a member for many years, and held that post until his death.

He was widely known throughout the state, particularly in Elk lodge circles, having attended a number of large functions with a former state officer, and now a national officer of the organization, who is a member of the Gettysburg lodge. The Elks home was closed Sunday out of respect to the memory of the deceased.

Mr. Smick had just engaged a tenant for his farm in order to permit his son to move to an adjoining farm of his father-in-law. The tenant takes charge of the farm March 8. Besides the farm, Mr. Smick owned several residence properties in Harrisburg. He planned to spend last night at the farm with his son.

Once Active in Politics

Mr. Smick was a lifelong democrat, frequently being called into service, while he farmed in Huntingtown township, as committeeman and judge of elections, and in other capacities. He took little interest in the affairs of the party during the last administration because he was not personally favorable to the patronage distribution policy, but he

GEORGE SMICK, ELKS STEWARD, DIES SUDDENLY

George Emery Smick, retired Adams county farmer and apple grower, and steward of the Gettysburg Elks lodge and club, died suddenly early Sunday morning from a heart attack. He passed his sixty-first birthday anniversary on December 11.

GEORGE EMERY SMICK

Apparently in his usual good health, having carried on his work, he was stricken with a heart attack late Friday evening and when he arrived at his home at 35 East Lincoln Avenue he asked Mrs. Smick to call a physician. Previously, when he felt badly, he would never permit the calling of a doctor and Mrs. Smick sensed that his condition was somewhat serious. Saturday he remained in bed at home. Saturday night, when it became apparent that the end was near, heavy opiates were administered to prevent suffering and he passed away peacefully in a coma as town clocks were striking the hour of six Sunday morning. He never regained full consciousness after eight o'clock Saturday evening. His immediate family was at his bedside when he died.

Born in Huntingtown Township

He possessed an unusually strong physical constitution, and news of his death, as it spread rapidly in the community Sunday morning, caused more than the ordinary shock to his wide circle of friends.

He and his family have been life long members of Upper Bermudian Lutheran church, in Huntingtown township, in the shadow of which he was born on a farm, a son of the late John and Hannah (Asper) Smick. When he and Mrs. Smick, nee Kathryn Hartman, daughter of John Hartman, of Franklin township, and sister of William Hartman, former Adams county director of the poor, were married 37 years ago, they moved to what is still known as the Smick farm about half a mile from Upper Bermudian church.

Smick retired from farming and moved to 35 East Lincoln avenue, Gettysburg. Their only son, John Smick, continued to operate the farm. Mr. Smick then became manager of the Adams County Farm Bureau when that co-operating buyers' organization was formed. He successfully launched it and got it well started and its operation is still continued. ENGLAND SEEKS 4 BILLIONS FOR DEFENSE USES

London, Feb. 20 (AP)—The British government asked parliament today to approve what probably is the costliest peacetime re-armament program in history, its purpose strengthened by uneasy developments in the European struggle for mastery of Spain and the Mediterranean.

A two-day debate on defense opening in the house of commons promised revelation on foreign policy, Britain's present strength of weakness and the progress of re-armament.

The resolution to increase the government's borrowing power for defense from $2,000,000,000 to $4,000,000,000 was to be moved by Sir John Simon, chancellor of the exchequer.

Britain may recognize the Burgos nationalists as the government of Spain within a short time although indications grew that Anglo-French proposals for a Spanish truce were meeting a cool reception from Generalissimo Franco.

When and if the Spanish peace is reached—possibly within a week or two—diplomats are expected to see Europe's most dangerous situation come to a head. Both Paris and London are afraid Premier Mussolini, with a large army in Spain, won't withdraw it unless France meets his demands.

Significant developments over the week-end included:

1. Report that President Roosevelt was ready to break his southern holiday because of the European situation.

2. A London report, not confirmed in Rome, that Italy called up 150,000 reservists and might call many more.

3. The chief of the Italian general staff, Marshal Pietro Badoglio, arrived in Libya where troops already were dispatched close to the border of French African colonies.

4. France took defense measures on the borders of French Somaliland and Tunisia because of the Italian moves.

A report published by an Italian newspaper that Adolf Hitler, Mussolini and Generalissimo Franco would meet soon to plan "a common front" against the democracies could not be confirmed in Rome or Burgos and was denied in Berlin.

Britain and France were concerned about Japanese occupation of Hainan island, believing it was a "timed" move after consultation with her axis partners, Berlin and Rome.

As an indication of French wariness, the Maginot defense line bordering Germany will go into a 36-hour "state of alert" Wednesday.

In Moscow, Soviet Russia Sunday signed a most-favored nation trade agreement with Poland, continuing the trade drive in which she has concluded or renewed agreements in recent weeks with France, Latvia, Estonia and Lithuania.

Members of the Balkan entente—Turkey, Greece, Yugoslavia and Rumania—met in Bucharest. High on their agenda were efforts to get Bulgaria to join, consideration of recognition of nationalist Spain and discussion of Germany's political-economic drive into southeastern Europe.

Order was restored and a close watch kept in Lima, Peru, after the short-lived attempt Sunday of Interior Minister General Antonio Rodriguez to seize the government during a brief absence of President Oscar Benavides. General Rodriguez and four other persons were killed.

James Denies Planning Presidential Campaign

Harrisburg, Feb. 20 (AP)—Governor Arthur H. James, replying to questions as to a possible candidacy for the republican nomination for President in 1940, said today:

"There will be no such campaign on my part."

He confined his comment to that remark when he was informed at his press conference that a radio commentator Sunday night said James' campaign for the presidency would start this week.

James, who headed the ticket, which defeated the first democratic state administration in Pennsylvania in almost half a century in the election last November, made the remark with a smile and added: "It's news to me."

SEEK PROBE FUNDS

Harrisburg, Feb. 20 (AP)—Attorney General Claude T. Reno said today Dauphin county officials had made application to the commonwealth for $100,000 to continue the grand jury investigation into campaign charges against former Governor Earle and 13 other high democrats. Reno said the county authorities had asked that part of the burden of the grand jury inquiry, in session for two and one-half months, be shifted from Dauphin taxpayers to the state.

STOCK REPORT

New York, Feb. 20 (AP)—Leading stocks stumbled in today's market and the majority suffered losses running to two or more points at the worst. Selling was light, however, and, near mid-day, sufficient support had arrived to reduce extreme reactions in most cases.

M'Call to Appeal To Supreme Court

til next Friday to permit an appeal to the United States Supreme court of his conviction in the death of five-year-old James Bailey Cash, Jr., who was kidnaped and killed last May.

McCall was to have died at the state prison farm here today. Superintendent L. F. Chapman of the prison, said he ordered postponement under authority given by the death warrant to hold executions any day of the week set by the governor. He said he acted after a telephone conversation with Governor Fred P. Cone.

The stay was obtained after relatives bade tearful goodbyes Sunday to the youth who confessed kidnaping the Cash child at Princeton, Florida, last May 28 and collecting $10,000 ransom after his victim was dead.

C. A. Avriett, of Jasper, McCall's attorney, said he would go to Washington immediately to present the case to the United States Supreme court.

Members of McCall's family, including his wife and his mother, were at the family home at Jasper.

McCall was neighbor of the Cashes at Princeton, Florida. His arrest followed a sensational man-hunt under supervision of Federal Bureau of Investigation Chief J. Edgar Hoover. All but $5 of the ransom was recovered.

Indicted for kidnaping and murder, he pleaded guilty to the former charge, but contended the boy smothered when he held a handkerchief over his mouth to prevent outcry. McCall said he wanted money to get fine clothes and luxuries for his wife.

Mountain Widow Defies Attempt To Seize Cabin

Conifer, Colo. (AP)—When the spring thaws come a showdown is scheduled between a mountain-dwelling widow and "the law."

The law—the state land board—wants the log-cabin site of 65-year-old Mrs. Le Ora Orr.

Says Mrs. Orr: "After building it with my own hands and living in it for 30 years I won't give up my home without a struggle."

The land board, with a supreme court decision behind it now, has claimed for 10 years that the Orrs built their place on school land through a surveyor's error and has sought to oust Mrs. Orr.

Two eviction orders, no good after 90 days, have expired in the desk of Sheriff Willis Morris. With a third gathering dust there, the sheriff says:

"The snow's too deep now to be running around in the hills with a simple eviction order. When the thaw comes maybe we'll get around to serving it."

State Attorney General Byron Rogers thinks the sheriff "feels sorry" for Mrs. Orr and has warned that "if he doesn't serve it we'll take drastic action." He added such action meant a citation for contempt that might put the sheriff behind his own bars.

Meanwhile, Mrs. Orr observes that a person makes a lot of hill folk friends in years of living on a mountain — and ventures the opinion she'll be in the old home for some time. Then she tells about the time she got out a small-bore rifle and chased away a man to whom the land board had given a lease on the land she claims.

And while the land board frets at the delay, Mrs. Orr just rocks in her chair beside the window—from where she can get a good view of all the pathways to her valley—and observes:

"I'll be sitting here whenever they come—and my friends will be up on Black Mountain behind my place."

Sports Roundup

By EDDIE BRIETZ

New York, Feb. 20 (AP)—The pros all want Babe Ruth to join the caravan. They like the big fellow and figure he'd be a terrific gate attraction. . . . Jim Tatum can't make up his mind whether to stay at Cornell as one of Carl Snively's lieutenants or go back home as head coach of football and basketball coach at University of North Carolina. . . . Jimmy McLarnin has had a couple of offers to fight Henry Armstrong, but will keep right on shooting golf in the low 70s at Hollywood unless the ante is raised plenty. . . . Francis Wallace, the sports writer who turned novelist, is dropping so much dough at Hialeah he may have to pitch in and write himself another book.

Bill Daly was going to tour Ireland with Patrick Edward Comiskey, but the British boxing board of control brass hats wouldn't let Pat in—said he wasn't good enough. Haw! . . . What's this about Gene Mako and Wayne Sabin nearly coming to blows several times since Sabin started beating Gene. . . . Mike Jacobs, who is collecting fat dividends from "Hellzapoppin'" will have a piece of the new Cotton club show.

It's news to Senator Bob Madry, demon tom tom beater of the University of North Carolina, that he is to be promoted to the fatter job of assistant controller. . . . RELIEF LISTS ARE DECREASING Harrisburg, Feb. 20 (AP)—A continuance of the down-trend in Pennsylvania's relief rolls after a long upward march was shown today by the department of public assistance.

Although the number of cases opened exceeded removals from direct relief, Secretary Howard Russell said "the smallness of the increase" during the week ended February 11 "reflects more favorable conditions in private employment, and fewer cases returning from federal work relief to state direct relief as a result of W.P.A. curtailment."

The net increase of 3,161 cases compared with jumps ranging from 4,000 to 6,000 cases in other recent weeks, prior to the first week of this month.

11 County Cases Opened

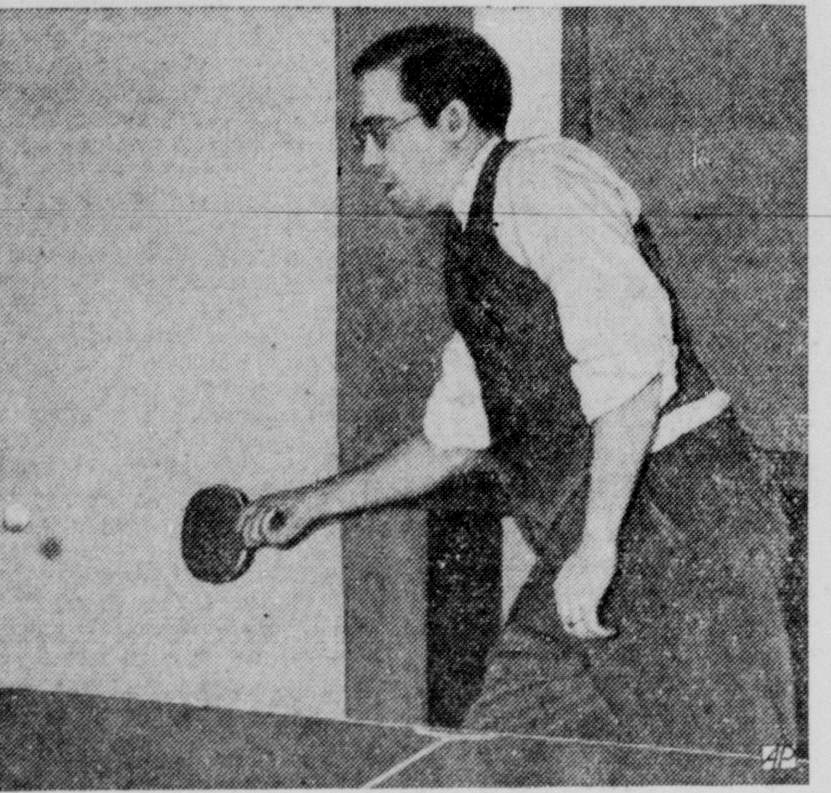

The net increase in the relief load in Adams county was two cases for the week ending February 11. There were eleven cases opened and nine closed. The weekly expenditure of $2,768 in the county covers 365 cases representing 1,496 persons.

confusion, but of order. We can imagine how some of the crowd would seat themselves with a scoff, others with a smile of incredulity, and some in mute expectancy. Yet there was a partial obedience on the part of all. The literal translation of John brings out that Christ's work was in response to their obedience. "The men sat down therefore Jesus took the loaves." When we do the thing Jesus bids He is not long in supplying our needs.

"Christ gave an interpretation of the miracle in a discourse in the synagogue at Capernaum. The following morning He and the disciples had returned to the city. Of course the multitude followed. He had performed the miracle because of His compassion on the hungry people and to teach them that He was the bread of life. They did not appreciate the latter and most significant reason. Therefore He said, 'Ye seek me, not because ye saw the sign but because ye did eat of the loaves and were filled.' They even suggested that He feed them again as Moses had fed their fathers in the wilderness. They showed they had missed the message of the act completely. They saw in Christ a worldly, material Messiah. Perhaps He brought their carnal expectation to a head so they would be the more conclusively disappointed, so they might realize the true reason of his coming. Therefore He said, I am the bread of life, he that cometh to me shall never hunger, and he that believeth on me shall never thirst.' 'Many went back and walked no more with Him.'

"Likewise today multitudes fail to apprehend that Jesus Christ is the bread of life. You say you feel quite capable and competent without this mystical thing of Savior and salvation. Yes, and that is just your placency that raises the ego to an sane degree. Let any one of us look searching into heart and conscience and we will see much there to make us humble. We are all dying in trespasses and sin until we partake of Jesus Christ. We may know the ten commandments forward and backward, but our wills are impotent. Or if by sheer force we are able to avoid certain forbidden things, yet we fall far short in the positive graces of love and goodwill. Our affections may be human, but not holy. Our conscience condemns us for sins against ourselves and one another and God. We can make no sufficient atonement. Unto us Christ says, 'The bread that I give is my flesh, which I give for the life of the world.' In other words He is the pascal lamb of our Passover from the bondage to flesh and sin. He is sacrificed for us and we feed on the sacrifice. Let your conscience, your heart, your desires, your will, and your whole being feed on Jesus Christ. He will be to you cleansing, and love and hope and truth and righteousness. He will be all in all. Feed upon Him by Faith which is the true eating of the true bread and your souls shall live.

"I am the bread of life, he that cometh to me shall never hunger, and he that believeth on me shall never thirst.' What does this mean for us? Our faith centers on a person. It is not the acceptance of a creed, nor the performance of a ritual, but the surrender of self to a personal, present Savior. He lives. He is a personality who not only sustains life, but gives life to them that feed upon Him. We have a vital personal relationship with a man and afterwards say, 'He has changed my outlook.' You will see with His eyes every little sin as a crime against God. In communion and fellowship with Him you will know the joy of forgiveness.

"Our relationship to Jesus is not compared to tasting or admiring but to eating. That means identification with Him. He is taken into every sphere and experience of life. His words and His will must be assimilated and become part of our very being. So that we can truly say, 'In Him we live and move and have our being.' Dear friend, what you and I have felt of Christ's power and sweetness and love is as nothing compared with the infinite depth that is possible. But we must not just taste and nibble at the Gospel. We must partake of it so that it becomes part of body, mind and soul. So that the Spirit of Christ becomes identified with our spirits.

"The bread which is Christ is not just a luxury; something we accept to make life more pleasant. Indeed it means sacrifice and the death of self. Partaking of Him is a necessity. A true Christian experience is not something which may or may not be added to the blessings of life. Without Christ you have no real life here or hereafter. He is the bread of life."

PAYS TRIBUTE TO COLLEGE AND SEMINARY GRAD

Upon the death of the Rev. Luther Scott Black in Easton last month, Dr. William Mather Lewis, president of Lafayette college, wrote an eulogy that was read at the funeral services.

The late Rev. Mr. Black and Doctor Lewis had been closely associated for the last thirteen years.

The late Rev. Mr. Black was a graduate of Gettysburg college and seminary. During his undergraduate years in college he was an outstanding athlete, winning fame as a pitcher for the Gettysburg baseball team.

Text of Eulogy

Doctor Lewis' tribute follows: "Now faith is the substance of things hoped for, the evidence of things not seen.

"These all died in faith, not having received the promises, but having seen them far off and were persuaded of them and embraced them, and confessed that they were pilgrims and strangers on the earth. "But now they desire a better country, that is a heavenly; wherefore God is not ashamed to be called their God for He hath prepared for them a city.

"Wherein lay the power of Luther Scott Black that made his life a blessing to all who came into the circle of his influence? It was not primarily the gifts of his mind, although he was a man of fine intellectual attainments and refined tastes. It was not primarily as a preacher, although his sermons have inspired countless numbers to live better and happier lives. It was not primarily his warm human qualities, although many of us know that as a true friend he had few peers and that with his wife he achieved a home life that was a benediction. It was not primarily his subtle and never-failing humor which brought joy to all who were privileged to be his companions.

Superb Faith

"It was in his superb faith in God. He lived better than any man can preach. He faced disappointment, difficulties, personal tragedies with amazing serenity because of his faith. He lifted up those who had fallen; he gave strength to those who were weak; he brought to us all a sense of sureness because of that faith.

"To Lafayette college this man of beautiful faith gave much. As college preacher, convocation speaker, teacher, his influence was positive and far reaching. But, above that was the unconscious ministry of faith which he preached as he passed among us on the campus and touched the lives of teacher and of student alike. He is not dead—the vital flame that burned undimmed within him has kindled myriad other fires. With reverent gratitude we give thanks to God that a gallant gentleman, a radiant Christian has passed this way."

Herbert B. Whilden, a bookkeeper, who died at Charleston, S. C., in 1935, left $1,250 each to North Carolina and South Carolina to be used for educational purposes.

TRUCK TURNS OVER; LOAD OF JELLY IS SPILLED

Two Dillsburg truckers escaped injury Saturday morning when their trailer-truck skidded on the frosty road surface trying to avoid a collision and overturned on the Jones-town road about seven and one-half miles east of Harrisburg.

Although their cargo of about $900 worth of jelly and canned foodstuffs was thrown over the highway, the occupants of the cab, Raymond Phillips, driver, and M. E. Baughman, his helper, were unhurt. Phillips, who was traveling east, said he applied his brakes and two passing trucks approached him from the foot of a hill. The wrecked truck is the property of M. E. Shillito, Dillsburg.

JUST A JOKE?

Duncannon, Pa., Feb. 20 (AP)—Police followed a trail of notes over the Clark's ferry bridge Sunday night. Each read: "Being kidnapped—please help." Later on, they arrested four boys who had strewn the hoax messages from an automobile. In jail cells, they wondered if it was all a joke after all.

ONE HUNDRED YEARS AGO

The Gettysburg Guards intend celebrating the Anniversary of the Birth of Washington, on Friday next, in the English Lutheran church, at half past ten o'clock a.
m. An address will be delivered by the Rev. Dr. Schmucker. The public generally are invited to attend.Married: On the 7th inst., by the Rev. C. Weyle, Mr. Moses Hickey, of Latimore township, to Miss Barbara Rex, of Menallen township.
On Wednesday, by the Rev. Wm.
Paxton, D. D., William Johnson, Esq., to Miss — Rankin, (formerly of Franklin county,) both of Fairfield, Adams county.Gettysburg Rail-Road: All suspense as to the fate of this important public work is now at an end.
It is to be discontinued on the 1st of March next.The resolution to this effect, which passed the House of Representatives, came up in the Senate on Tuesday last, and after a discussion of three days, was passed through committee by that body with a proviso offered by Mr.
Strohm, directing the Canal Commissioners to take measures to protect the culverts and guard rails on the road from delapidation.
He said "altho' he was in favor of suspending work on the road at present, yet it might be resumed at some future day—the work was made in the very best manner, and it ought to be protected.Mr. Penrose made a very eloquent speech in favor of the road, and moved an appropriation of $250,000.
In the course of his remarks he said "if we abandon this Gettysburg rail-road, we violate the principle of state fidelity—the principle of fidelity to contracts." Gen. Miller declared himself opposed to the motion, but was in favor of a subscription of stock to the York and Gettysburg rail-road. Mr. Penrose's motion was negative, and motion to stop the work of the North and West Branches, was also negative; and the resolution to stop our Road, as above mentioned, passed through committee.Later! A letter from Harrisburg informs us that the resolution to stop the Gettysburg Rail-road on the 1st of March, has passed both Houses. An appropriation of $150,000 is made to pay contractors and damages to Land-holders; the salaries of all Officers on the road to cease on the 15th of March, unless some masonry is to be done—in that event, to cease on the 15th of June.The "Philomathean Society of Pennsylvania College" celebrated their eighth Anniversary in Christ's Church on Friday evening last.
Interesting addresses were delivered by C. P. Krauth, C. A. Hay and J.
Heck—all active members of the Society. The assemblage was very large and attentive.SEVENTY-FIVE YEARS AGO

Thomas, of Straban township, toMiss Sallie A. Stallsmith, daughter of the late Peter Stallsmith.On the 24th ult., by the Rev. J. A.
Bohl, Mr. William Irwin, of Buchanan Valley, to Miss Mary J. Brinkerhoff, of Mummaburg.Refugees: On Sunday last twenty-five Southerners arrived in this place on foot, as refugees from Southern conscription. They are all from Rockingham county, Va., and have been secreting themselves to escape conscription officers for some time. They at last found an opportunity to get off, in small squad, to our lines, and there received passes to this place. They left their homes on the 1st and 2nd of this month. More are on the road, they say. They are seeking for work in this part of the country; and as laborers will be somewhat scarce, they will no doubt find employment. They all look as though they had been accustomed to labor. They appear to be much gratified that they have escaped conscription in the Rebel army and feel much relieved. There are among them a father and four sons.Sabbath School Concert: The Sabbath School of the German Reformed church will give an Anniversary Concert on Monday evening, Feb. 22nd, for which the most thorough preparation is being made.
The charge for admission will be 15 cents, the proceeds to be devoted to the purchase of a new library for the school, the old one having been lost by the occupation of the church during and after the battle.
Interesting exercises may be expected.Mrs. Tom Thumb is a mother.—

Sundown Story

By MARY GRAHAM BONNERSWIMMING LESSONS
"A H," squeaked Mrs. Johnny Penguin to her mate, "the little ones look very much as we do now.
Their feet are much more pale, however, and their bills are light colored and their tails are shorter, but they are big for their age and bright, too.""Don't you think it would be all right to give them a swimming lesson?""I think so," agreed Mr. Johnny Penguin. "It is true that if we wereat home we would not let them go in so soon, but where we live we are in danger of sea leopards and the babies would not know how to get away from such enemies. Yes, I think it would be an excellent idea to start their swimming instruction here."Christopher Columbus Crow and Mrs. Quacko Duck had been listening to this talk between the two parent penguins."Do you have to teach them to swim?" asked Mrs. Quacko."They do not go into the water without a little assistance, or perhaps you would say a little push from us," replied Mrs. Johnny Penguin."May we see you giving them their swimming lessons?" asked Christopher, who liked to discover what he could.Mrs. Johnny Penguin told the penguin children to follow her and she led them to the edge of the pond. "Now come into the water," she said. But the penguins stood on the edge of the bank. She went right in herself and as soon as it was deep enough she swam under water, only coming up with a leap for air every once in a while. Fluffy and Downy watched her. But this was not all of their lesson.

THE BLUE JAY

The blue jay is the soldier of the placeIn trim regalia gloriously arrayed, As if turned out to go on dress parade;A sort of "Tommy Atkins" in disgrace Until there comes a common foe to faceOf which his gentler fellows are afraid.Let once an owl the neighborhood invadeAnd that, of course, is quite a different case.Some say the blue jay has no moral sense.They do not like him loitering about.In times of peace and done with all pretenseThey call the blue jay just a thieving lout.I often wonder what would happen thoughIf peace were threatened by the owl or crow.

Today's Talk

By George Matthew Adams

SO MUCH IN COMMON

THE beloved Will Rogers once said that he had never met a man that he didn't like. Well, I have never met a man, or a woman, in whom I didn't see a great deal of myself — this is, a great deal of the human and natural traits common to me and to everyone. Of course, I wouldn't like to see many of the bad traits in me common to anybody else — though they may be at that!I can see no reason why human beings should be classed. Regardless of race, color, religion or nationality, all eat, laugh, suffer, love, live — and die. The stream is human, and this fact should unite all the intelligence into one uniform flow of understanding, sympathy, and cooperation.The worst possible use that a human being can be put to is to line him up with a gun in battle, and ask him to shoot his fellow man — no matter who he is, or what one may think of him. It simply isn't sense. It's gross ignorance, and against every law of life, humanity, and God.How much in common we have with everyone — be that one fortunate or unfortunate, rich or poor!I have known and talked with almost every type of human being, outside a savage, and I always see in each a common strain, a similarity, and a touch of the Creator's love and skill. Most of them are alike in tastes and desires, in greater or less degree.After all, if we criticize, or condemn, where did we get that right?
None of us is any bigger than he does. There are glory and compensation for all, according to the worth of each.There can be no just neutrality in the common need. When cities are stricken in Peru, Tokio, or the last known spot on this old earth, a common interest flames. All are brothers, outside and inside the skin.
The soul is universal.

Here are a few lines from the late John Galsworthy's prayer:

"Grant me one prayer: Doom not the hereafter Of mankind to war . . .Let not my sinking In dark be for naught, my death a vain thing!
God let me know it the end of man's fever!
Make my last breath a bugle call, carrying Peace o'er the valleys and cold hills for ever!"The people of this world have too much in common to madly and wantonly destroy its cherished hearthstone and its hope.

Dangerous Service

By Grace Elliott Taylor

Peter Mallone: Adventurous correspondent for the London News.Petroneila: His charming young sister.Tony Lance: British agent, in love with Petrel.Yesterday: Petrel and Tony dance, play, make love. Then Tony's papers arrive.Chapter 29 Dispatch From MoscowPetrel ran up the steps of the Continental. Ted Masters and Rogers were drinking together at a small table near the door. She crossed an angle of the lounge to speak to them. They stood. They looked tired, dusty, hot. They had needed that drink, she surmised.
What had been happening in Cairo?

"A hard day?" she asked.

"A thoroughly nasty day. Plenty of lost tempers. Petrel is still out."But Petroneila sang softly to herself as she bathed and changed.
Another beautiful evening of dancing, laughter, and love making was approaching. Usually her spirits were infected easily by her surroundings, but tonight the strife in Cairo could not depress them. For once she would be utterly selfish.
She would refuse to think about the wounded police, the angry demonstrators, injured, or kicking their brown heels in jail. She was in love.When she heard a knock at her door, she opened it instantly. It might be Tony. She was ready.
But it was Peter who came stumbling into the light. He had a blood-stained handkerchief round his left temple, and a drawn, sheepish grin on his face; smears of dust, and blood made his appearance ghastly.

"Peter!"

"Sorry, my dear. I've gone and got hurt again. I wonder if you would just fix me up.""You're not badly injured? What happened?""A trolley car mobbed and overturned. I was near, and got into the scrap. Couldn't stand by and see women and children crushed.
Got hit on the head with a bottle."He was swaying. He could not walk straight to the sofa."Well, you come right here and lie down, old darling, and show me what they've done to spoil your bump of chivalry." When she saw the bruise and the jagged cut, she understood the glazed, bright look in his eyes. She believed he had slight concussion. He did not know it. He babbled cheerfully to her, as the warmth of the brandy she gave him repelled his nausea and faintness. When she had bathed and bandaged him, he raised his right hand. It hung limp from the wrist."This doesn't seem to be much good either, Petrel. Awfully sorry old girl," he said, and fainted.Briskly, with two combs, and strips from the hotel face towel, she made a rough splint. That was as good a job as she could make of it. It would prevent the pain of creptus. Now she must find one of the already over-worked doctors. But it would not matter, so desperately if he could not come at once.

"Feel better, old boy?"

"Heaps better. You'll need to refill your flask! Think I'll just stay here quietly." He spoke as if he was making a concession to feminine over-anxiety, not obeying necessity. Petrel wrinkled her nose. "Yes, I shouldn't go playing squash, or riding a camel, or fighting any more trolleys if I were you!" she laughed. "That wrist must be properly set, Peter, andyour head would be better off with a stitch to draw it together, instead of my plaster. I'll be back as soon as I can. The clerk will help me find a doctor by telephone.""You'll have to feed my face for me. Wouldn't this have been an ideal opportunity for Aunt Maisie to make me eat fat, and Marigold to feed me with oysters? I don't like fat, or oysters, you know," he told her, confidentially."What an odd thing to say, Peter.
I don't remember Aunt Maisie ever attempting to make you eat fat."

"It's You I Wanted

"Oh yes, yes she did, once. And Marigold tried to feed me oysters at Quaglin's last winter. Before we went to Greece. And again in the Jubilee week, at the Savoy. You know, Petrel," he gripped her wrist, with his uninjured hand. "Marigold just can't understand why I don't like oysters. I feel sleepy. Sleepy as an oyster.""You certainly finished that flask all right," smiled Petrel, releasing himself gently. But she was worried. She did not believe that Peter was drunk. He had been convivial several times since their last visit to England. But this was the first time he had told her that he had met Marigold in London. She had wondered, and half guessed that he had. Their visit to Marigold's country home had not been a success. Neither Marigold's forced gaiety, or young Jeremy Peter, crawling on the hearth-rug, or her own efforts at conversation, had been sufficient cover for Peter's numbness, and the unalterable thought in all their minds. "That is still a mistake.""Try to sleep. Goodbye for a little while.""G-by," mumbled Peter. He was muttering again, as she closed the door.Petroneila seemed to be gone a long time, thought Peter. His mind walked through strange mazes.
Aunt Maisie, and his childhood, were inexplicably mixed up with meeting Marigold in the little room, in her parents' empty house, in Kensington. There were dust sheets draped over everything, but the windows, unexpectedly, looked out over the Aegean sea. One moment, Marigold was clinging to him, and Marigold's kisses seemed real. The next, he knew he was dreaming, for Marigold kept calling him "comrade," and Aunt Maisie, riding a white Arab horse, was trying to push them apart.
Somebody he could not recognize was hitting him over the head with a sandbag, with a series of dull thuds.A knock on the door wakened him into the present. "Come in!""Hello, Peter." He struggled into a sitting position and blinked."Hello, Lance. Petrel has gone out for a minute or two.""What is the matter with that girl?" he said, and frowned.It was you I wanted to see. Masters told me I'd find you here. Are you all right?""Yes, just taking a little shut eye. Got a bit dented as you see by my head. But it isn't as bad as it looks." Peter was sitting up. His slight color, and bright eyes, gave him an air of eager health. Tony was worried about something, and he wanted to know what it was.
For the moment, his mind had cleared itself completely."I'm glad, Mallone, because I've come to ask you to do a job for me.
It is something I can't do myself.
You've guessed why I'm here?"

"Waiting for something?"

"Yes, which has arrived—almost arrived. I'm here to receive papers from Moscow. Rene Howard, who is a British agent, flew them here But he crashed just over an hourago in the desert, outside the city.
Near the Fayum Road. Petrel and I saw his lights. There was mist.
Perhaps he was short of gas. He is very seriously injured. He has been taken to the Anglo-American hospital.

Plan of Campaign

"You mean to tell me that Rene Howard is—""One of the cleverest British spies living. I thought Petrel would have told you. She must know. He helped you gain your release from Germany."Peter whistled. "I suppose it wasn't her secret to tell. She never breathed a word. It accounts for a lot I haven't understood. At first I resented her so much as speaking to the slick, effeminate devil. Till I found I liked him myself."Tony smiled. "She did not tell me, either. I dared not tell her for fear she couldn't keep secrets. This information is pretty important.
It was an amazing piece of work to procure it at all. It gives the organized plan of campaign for Marxist propaganda for the coming three years.""Of course. And this will show you where to expect strikes, sabotage, wrecking, riots? Fine! What do you want me to do?""The papers are copies. It is only suspected Rene may have managed to get them. No one knows for certain there was a leakage. He left, half an hour before they tried to arrest him. That head of yours will be sufficient excuse to wander into the Anglo-American and find him. If he is conscious, find out if he has the papers on him; he'll give them to you. But they may have been taken from him by the police, after he was hauled out of the wrecked plane. Find that out.
I'd go myself, if I could lose my shadow. But it is no use. They're hot on to this plane business. I might get that dispatch, but I shouldn't keep it long. But they won't suspect you, with that head.
If, as I think, he'll have kept the dispatch, bring it to me at the Continental."

Peter nodded. "Right, Tony."

"Thanks, Peter. Sure you're up to it? I didn't want to let any of the others in on this, because—""No, of course not," grinned Peter. "They might put their careers first, and give it a scoop headline. Keep this in the family!"This was how it happened that when Petroneila returned, ten minutes later, with a Dr. Abraham, who had only been persuaded to leave his surgery because she looked anxious, and had a sweet smile, they found the couch bare, the room empty, the patient gone.Recompensing him for his trouble, Petroneila showed the doctor apologetically to the lift again.They passed Fleur's door. Through it, they both heard the sound of stormy sobbing. The doctor shrugged.
"A doctor is no use there, either."When he had gone, she returned, and knocked. There was no answer.

She entered.

"Fleur! Please, Fleur, what is it?"

she asked the collapsed bundle, heaving on the bed. She dreaded what she might hear."Rene is dying. I knew it was going to happen. Mein Gott, now what will become of me? My work gone! Without him, I have nothing, nothing! I shall starve."(Copyright, 1939,
